Our Programs

Services for adults with developmental disabilities

Residential

People live in a community group home and receive support with daily routines. Staff help residents make choices about their home life, take part in household activities, and stay connected to their community.

Examples Personal care, preparing meals, and planning outings

Supported Living

People live in a home of their choosing and receive support tailored to their needs. Staff help each person build skills for managing their household and organizing their day with greater independence.

Examples Grocery shopping, laundry, and keeping appointments

Personal Support

Staff provide individualized assistance at home and in the community. Support can involve hands-on help with daily tasks or coaching so the person can practice skills tied to their own goals.

Examples Getting ready for the day, running errands, and practicing daily routines

Respite Care

Short-term support gives regular caregivers time to rest, work, or attend to other responsibilities. Staff follow the person’s routines and support needs during the caregiver’s absence.

Examples Help with meals, familiar activities, and personal care during a planned break

Nursing Support Services

Nurses help identify and monitor health needs, guide health-related supports, and train or supervise staff who carry out delegated nursing tasks. The supports depend on the person’s individual needs.

Examples Health monitoring and oversight of delegated nursing tasks

Transportation

Transportation helps people get to and from authorized services and activities. Arrangements take into account mobility needs, the destination, and what is included in the person’s service plan.

Examples Travel to an authorized day program, employment service, or community activity

Community Development Services (CDS)

People build practical skills and relationships while taking part in activities in local community settings. Staff help each person choose activities based on their interests and develop confidence using community resources.

Examples Volunteering, visiting the library, or joining a recreation group

Employment Services

People explore work that matches their interests and strengths, prepare to apply for jobs, and receive support after they are hired. Job coaching can help a person learn duties and develop workplace routines.

Examples Interview practice, job development, and on-the-job coaching

Day Habilitation

Structured daytime activities help people build communication, social, and daily living skills. Staff use a person’s goals and interests to guide individual and group activities.

Examples Practicing meal preparation, communication, and group participation
